During the past two years, COVID-19 has impacted our daily lives in countless ways. As a result of the virus, the Supply Chain became fractured, disrupting global logistics operations and the industrial workforce. In an instant, the Supply Chain was front and center in the daily news and international dialogue. Engage with industry leaders to learn about how the onset of the pandemic challenged logistics professionals and companies to meet customers' needs as the use of e-commerce exploded. Hear about how firms are adapting to the evolving workforce development challenge. Tour the Chaffey College Industrial Technical Learning Center (InTech), a regional training center designed to train and upskill the workforce pipeline for business and industry in the Inland Empire. Find out how it addresses industrial workforce shortages and skills gaps for incumbent workers and those entering the world of distribution.

Who should attend: Distribution Center and Supply Chain Management professionals, Industrial Technical Educators and Trainers, Industrial Maintenance Managers, Human Resource Managers
